CHRISTMAS FUND WILL BE $85,000

TWO INSTITUTIONS WILL RELEASE CASH EARLY IN DECEMBER

Club Members Will Get Money In Time For Shopping

Approximately $85,000 will be dropped in the Santa Claus stockings of thrifty Xenians within the next two weeks.

This amount—with interest—will be distributed to about 1,950 members of Christmas Savings Clubs by two Xenia financial institutions that annually sponsor this method of conserving money—the Commercial and Savings Bank and the Home Building and Savings Co. Checks will be mailed out the first week in December.

The Home Building and Savings Co. this year will distribute $42,000 among 938 depositors, while the Commercial Bank will mail out checks totalling about $42,000 to slightly more than 1,000 club members.

The Christmas Club is a national organization and it is estimated that a grand total of $600,000,000 will be distributed early in December to twelve million club members throughout the country under more than 8000 banking and other financial institutions.

For the first time in the history of its twenty-one years of service, Christmas Club and its subscribing members are coordinating the distribution of this huge sum with the activities of thousands of local merchants in more than 4,000 communities in a program to inspire wise and useful spending during the week beginning November 30, to be known as Christmas Prosperity Week.

It is the belief of those identified with this plan that a slow and steady recovery to normal conditions will be accomplished by a logical approach to a subnormal public policy to spend wisely, according to their present ability. An appropriate time to start such a movement is offered by the Christmas Club distribution during the week of November 30.

The average amount to be received by each member from the two Xenia institutions is about $42, a slightly lower average than last year. The opinion is uniformly expressed, however, that the Christmas Club plan has made an excellent showing in view of present conditions and that it will offer an outstanding contribution to stabilizing business activities in the approaching pre-holiday season.

WETS ASK INNING FROM UNIVERSITY

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 13.—The wets came up today to ask their inning in a classroom at Ohio State University as the drys ended their presentation of the prohibition problem with the last of a series of enforcement lectures at the university under the sponsorship of a campus religious council.

In a letter to President George W. Rightmire of Ohio State University, Herbert S. Duffy, executive commander of the Columbus district of the crusaders, a national anti-prohibition organization, expressed his regret that "an institution of learning should countenance the discussion of a non-educational subject in its classrooms," but declared that his group felt that since the university had "permitted these 'dry' lectures to employ the facilities of the university" it should afford the crusaders "equal facilities and time."

RAILS SCHEDULED TO DIE IN CHAIR

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 13.—All hope to save Walter Ralls and Blanton Ralls, Cristina Negros convicted of the slaying of Sheriff George Davenport of Crawford County, vanished into thin air today.

The two men must die tonight according to schedule.

The last hope for the condemned men faded this morning when the state parole board announced definitely and conclusively that it will not intervene in the cases of the two Negroes.

A short time before, S. P. Dunn, executive secretary to Governor George White, announced the formal rejection by the governor for commutation of the death sentence.

AN INVESTIGATION of the collision showed that Driscoll turned out to pass an automobile which was ahead of him and crashed into the street car which bore down from the opposite direction. The automobile was demolished.

None of the street car passengers was hurt.

NATION OFFERS SYMPATHY

Story of Edith Riley Arouses Feeling; Child Is Showered With Gifts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—How a little child's suffering has aroused the feeling of the entire nation was revealed today by the scores of letters and gifts which poured into Gallingher Hospital here from all over the country for Edith Riley, 13-year-old alleged victim of four year's torture at the hands of a cruel stepmother.

Told through the medium of the press all the pitiful details of the child's imprisonment in a dark, foul closet and other heinous tortures inflicted on her, mothers, fathers, young married couples and even children have written sympathetic letters, sent money, gifts and offers of a home.

From St. Paul, Minnesota, came a large doll; from Watertown, Conn., came the offer of a home; from New York came a baby carriage and money. From scores of other places came messages of hope and encouragement.

Little Mary Kilian, of St. Paul, who sent the doll, wrote:

"Dear Edith, just a line to say I am praying for the return of good health for you. Love and kisses for your little girl friend."

A young married couple from Steubenville, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Noy, sent Christmas cards and notes of sympathy.

Gifts poured in until the tiny ward became a virtual fairy land. A beautiful song bird, sent by a woman, added its twittering to the joyous atmosphere.

Wide-eyed little Edith, experiencing the first comfort and kindness she has known in eight years, even received a proposal of marriage. This came from red-headed little Russell Barker, vivacious youngster who has done more to bring happiness back into the little victim's frightened eyes and interest to her dazed mind than all the toys she has received.

Over the tiny tea-cups of the first tea-party Edith ever had, Russell broached the question with a nonchalance many a man would envy.

"Say Edith," he exclaimed with a grin between mouthfuls of cake, "lets you and I get married when we grow up and have a home."

Edith laughed out loud, the second time she has laughed since her arrival in the hospital a week ago.

But she gave no answer and the little boy with the laughing eyes forgot matrimony in the next mouthful of cake.

While the warped mind of the cupboard baby was gradually awakening today to the normal interests of child life, the grand jury was completing its report of the cruelty charges against the father and step-mother. It is expected indictments will be returned by the next twenty-four hours.

Still Ponders Fate; Learns Her Story Has Been Revealed

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 13.—The spiritual struggles of a character so real as Rose E. Allen.

The pretty debutante, whose brother, Edward H. B. Allen, killed her lover, Francis A. Donaldson 3rd, is facing today the problem of "Coquette."

Friends are remarking on the similarity of the stage situation and Rose Allen's actual dilemma.

Both Rose and "coquette" are confronted with the task of choosing between the living and the dead.

It is Rose's brother who has snuffed out the life of the man she loved, while in the famous play it is the father, but little did Rose think when she saw the drama several years ago that she would find herself in a comparable predicament.

"Coquette" took the easy, dramatic way out of that playwright's reserve for emotional actresses.

For Rose it is harder. There must be a decision, that is how things are, on opposite sides of the footlights.

And Rose must decide today. Today the machinery of justice will be set in motion in the little

YOUTH SHOOTS GIRL FRIEND THEN KILLS SELF IN CLEVELAND

Lovers' Quarrel Is Blamed For Double Tragedy

CLEVELAND, Nov. 13.—Murder and suicide, coming as the climax of a youthful lovers' quarrel, today were recorded by police in the deaths of Elizabeth Kasarda, 18, who was shot and killed by Charles Simek, 21, just before Simek turned the same gun upon himself and inflicted fatal injuries.

Simek said that he and Phillips, who makes his home with a daughter, Mrs. Mahanna, at Courtland, were on their way to Florida to spend the winter. The driver apparently drove onto the crossing without seeing the approaching train.

Phillips, an examination revealed, suffered a skull fracture, brain concussion, possible internal injuries and severe cuts about the head and face. Because of his age his condition is critical, according to Dr. Marshall Best, attending physician.

Shrum said he and Phillips, who had not regained consciousness in Espay Hospital, this city, Friday morning.

His companion, Charles Shrum, 55, home-at-large, escaped with minor injuries.

Shrum was bruised about the hips and suffered deep scalp wounds but was able to leave the hospital Thursday night. Arrival of the daughter from Courtland, O., was expected Friday.

The injured men were brought to Xenia on the train which struck their car. Phillips was transferred to a J. H. Whitmer ambulance and brought to Espay Hospital. He is a widow.

The train which struck the "house on wheels" was No. 267 in charge of Engineer L. E. Daly and Conductor George Sieber.

Although Miss Kasarda's mother said the couple was not formally engaged the girl wore a ring belonging to her slayer when she was killed. They had met two years ago in high school, friends said.

Miss Kasarda, with Leona Thomas, 18, was returning home shortly before midnight after an evening of bowling. Simek, in an automobile, had been waiting at the bowling alley but the girls had refused to ride with him. He followed them almost to Miss Kasarda's home where she finally decided to talk to him.

After the two conversed a few minutes, the girl started to walk away. A single shot rang out and Miss Kasarda fell dead. Miss Thomas rushed to her side just as a second shot was fired which resulted in Simek's death less than fifteen minutes later.

Simek had called at the Kasarda home Sunday night and police learned the couple had quarreled at that time and that they had not seen each other since.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 13.—George Anthony Reginald Williams and his bride, formerly Lady Mary Heath, British aviatrix, were honeymooning today.

They were married at the Kasarda home Sunday night and police learned the couple had quarreled at that time and that they had not seen each other since.

Williams is a native of Windward Islands, British West Indies, where his father is a government official at present.

READ THIS FIRST:

Lois Corbin, a pretty working girl falls in love with Bruce Durand, the nephew of Charles Durand, one of Chicago's wealthiest men. Ashamed to have Bruce know where she lives, Lois leaves her family and goes to share an apartment with Margaret and Arlene, two of her girl friends. Arlene falls in love with Bruce herself, and sets about winning him. She tells him that Lois has gone out with another man one night when Bruce calls for her, when in reality she has gone to a movie because Arlene has told her that Bruce could not come down that night. Bruce is driven by jealousy to fall deliberately into the trap Arlene has set for him. Lois sends her engagement ring back to him and moves into a little room down on Rush street so that she will not have to live with Arlene. Lois gets unbearably homesick there, and finally swallows her pride and goes back to her home. Her mother is elated because she has come back to live with them, and even Lois is glad to be there once more. She realizes that this is her place, after all. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Durand have heard that their nephew has announced his intention to marry a girl who is not in the social register, and Mrs. Durand insists that they return at once to America and settle the Bruce so that he will not do anything foolish. Bruce is sorry that he has made a second date with Arlene, because he can't think about anyone else except Lois. However, he goes for her, and on the way to the club they pass his home. Arlene insists on going inside, and Bruce decides that this is as good as any other way that he knows of to kill time. Bruce is obviously bored with Arlene, but she is having a good time. He plays the radio, and they make an attempt at conversation. Bruce finally suggests that they leave, and as he helps Arlene on with her coat she puts her lips up and kisses him. At that same moment he is aware that someone is watching them.

...GO ON WITH THE STORY...

CHAPTER 29

BRUCE did not have to turn around to find out who was standing in the hallway. Almost immediately he heard the voice of his aunt speaking to him in no uncertain tones. She was hysterical, she was forceful, she was demanding, she was everything all at once. Bruce couldn't explain. She wouldn't give him a chance. She rambled on about the time and money that both she and Charles had spent in bringing him up only to find that he was making love to a thief, a girl who had stolen. She went on flinging epithets after him.

Charles Durand helped the cab driver bring in the luggage and had just set it down in the hallway. He had hated this worse than anything in the world. All the way out he had secretly hoped that Bruce would not be here. Now it was worse than ever. He not only was here but the girl was with him.

"What have you to say for yourself?" Eleanore hurried at Arlene. Arlene was panicky. She knew at once that Mrs. Durand thought she was Lois. She tried to tell her, Bruce tried to tell her, but it was no use. No one could do anything at all until Mr. Durand entered the room.

Then he said, "Let's talk this thing out quietly. My nerves are just about shot."

He motioned for all of them to sit down. When Bruce got a chance, he said, "You've made a mistake, in the first place. I have an idea what you think. But you're wrong. In spite of the fact that Mrs. Hayes promised me she wouldn't write to you I can see that she did. Well, this isn't the girl that Mrs. Hayes wrote you about. That's your first mistake."

He knew that he was red all over. His neck was burning up. He was simply furious. He wondered whether or not he could control himself enough to go through with the explanation.

His Aunt Eleanore paid no attention to the fact that the girl who was sitting there was in no wise implicated in the affair. She went on with her tirade.

"You do admit, then, that it's true. That there is a girl to whom you're engaged. Then all that Ruth wrote me is true! Oh, dear, I was hoping that I would find it was all a mistake!"

"What have you to say for yourself?"

Sue began to weep. Mr. Durand took her hand.

"Eleanore," he said, "why don't we permit Bruce and this young woman to depart? I'm certain it is unseemly for her and we can talk to Bruce regarding it later."

Mrs. Durand thought it over and finally consented. Before Bruce had gone out the door with Arlene, Mrs. Durand came up and apologized to her.

"I'm awfully sorry, dear," she said, "but I'm sure you can understand how we must feel about it. We came all the way from Europe when we heard Bruce was in trouble."

Bruce winced. It was all to unbearable! Here was Arlene getting all the information concerning his aunt's attitude toward Lois. He had a sudden desire to go back in there and in front of everyone declare his love for Lois Corbin. The more he thought about it the hotter he became. The idea of Mrs. Hayes stirring up all that trouble! He would like to make some trouble for her! He could do it, too, if he desired. He wished nothing had happened between himself and Lois. He wanted to stand beside her through all the accusations that had been made against her.

He took Arlene on to the country club, as he had promised but he never passed such a miserable two hours in his life. Arlene made herself more obnoxious than ever, or else she seemed that way because Bruce was so wrought up about everything. She insisted on being introduced to everyone who came near them and even asked to have that terrible Mrs. Hayes pointed out to her. It appeared to Bruce to be more of a matter of curiosity than anything else that Arlene wanted to see her. Certainly it was not because she was displaying any sympathy for Lois, for Arlene had not once mentioned the fact that she was sorry for Lois.

Bruce found himself defending Lois without intending to do so. "I want you to understand that

He motioned for all of them to sit down. When Bruce got a chance, he said, "You've made a mistake, in the first place. I have an idea what you think. But you're wrong. In spite of the fact that Mrs. Hayes promised me she wouldn't write to you I can see that she did. Well, this isn't the girl that Mrs. Hayes wrote you about. That's your first mistake."

"You do admit, then, that it's true. That there is a girl to whom you're engaged. Then all that Ruth wrote me is true! Oh, dear, I was they can make trouble for another woman if they'd practice being a little truer to their own sex perhaps they'd get along a little better."

Arlene winced. Bruce wasn't being very complimentary—talking about women in front of her. She put her arm through his as they stood there together in a darkened corner of the big enclosed porch.

"Don't worry, darling," she caressed. "I'll stand by you. I'll go back home with you if you want me to. You can tell your aunt that I am the girl who was with you, if you desire."

Bruce was praying for the evening to end. He wanted to get home, or to get some place where he could be alone so that he could think things out. Apparently it was very easy. He didn't have Lois any longer. Why should he have to defend her? He could simply tell his aunt that it was all over, that he had broken up with Lois and that there was no further cause for worry.

Still, that didn't seem quite right either. It made him feel as though he were walking out the back door, as though he were yellow, afraid to face things, and he wasn't. He desired to go after Lois and bring her up to his home, to clear her before everybody. Then, if his folks didn't believe him he would run away with her and tell them that he believed her anyway.

There is something about human nature that simply rebels against wrong doing. In fact this affair only strengthened Bruce's feelings toward Lois. All the way to Arlene's apartment, he was thinking that he would go on up—and kidnap Lois! At least he would demand an explanation. He couldn't go on this way.

Margaret was still up when Arlene and Bruce arrived. She was lying on the davenport reading a book. It was late, Bruce asked to come in anyway. It was evident, after he had entered the room, that there was only one thing he desired.

"Isn't Lois home yet?" he asked pointedly.

Margaret looked at him as though she thought he were crazy.

"Lois?" Bruce said crossly. Margaret laid down her book. "Lois doesn't live here anymore," she said quickly, "I thought you knew that."

TODAY's the day of outdoor life! Men and women retain their youth — their joy in a healthful, vigorous body.

A daily enemy of health is constipation. Intestinal sluggishness often leads to headaches, backaches, lack of pep, premature aging, loss of good looks.

It is unwise to fight constipation with habit-forming pills and drugs. They often do more harm than good.

The wise and healthful way is to correct the diet. Your system needs "bulk" and Vitamin B in generous quantities to keep it healthfully regular.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, a delicious ready-to-eat cereal, gives you both of these things. It furnishes "bulk," which gently exercises the intestines. And Vitamin B, which tones them up.

In addition, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains iron, which helps build rich, red blood!

Start now to eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly — either as a cereal or in cooked foods. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient to prevent and to relieve most cases of constipation. (See your doctor, however, if you suffer from intestinal trouble not relieved this way.)

Be sure you get Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

AT 100, SHE WANTS TO FLY ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y.

On her 100th birthday Mrs. Torny of Brooklyn expressed a desire to take an airplane ride over New York. Lieutenant G. Ray Culmann, hearing about it, invited her to make the trip. Illness, however, overcame her before she could accept the offer. In her letter to the young lieutenant, she wrote: "Isn't it lovely to know that at 100 years of age I am still able to encourage a dashing young man to invite me out for a ride."

Dr. G. W. Kuhn, N. King St., left Friday morning to enjoy a two weeks' hunting trip in Foster City, Mich. He will be accompanied on the trip by Mr. Alfred Doran, of Foster City.

COURAGE

"The thing that we need is courage," says Senator James J. Davis in a recent article. "We need now to proclaim courage as widely as we have proclaimed fear. This is a great country, a great continent of which we live. So let us stop whispering about fear and with the flaming sword of courage in our hands, let us step forward into the sun. Let us look with reason into our situation and without undue exaggeration or undervaluation, take stock of ourselves and realize that we live in a land that is good. We need to understand that the sun is shining, that the storms have blown themselves out."

"Fear is a state of mind. It is one of the most elemental of emotions. Yet in most cases the evil that we envision never arrives. The monsters that plague our childish fancy in the dark prove, when we turn on the light, to be only the friendly chairs in whose kindly arms we have found comfort."

"Storms that disturb us pass. Winds that raise havoc subside. Pain or destruction is wiped away. We must expect lean years. But we may expect fat years too. History does repeat itself. And this country is what we ourselves make it!"

"Recently we have been afraid, quivering and trembling and telling others about it so that they were afraid. But our people are going back to work. Our farms and our factories are opening to the plow and the driving wheel."

"The calamity howler has had his say and is breathless at last."

RICHEST MAN

The Nizam of Hyderabad is described in dispatches relating the marriage of his son and heir to the only daughter of the former Caliph of Turkey, as "the world's richest man." A check for $200,000 and a million dollars' worth of jewels, which he presented to the bride's father, was mere chicken-feed to a potentate reputed to be worth $2,000,000,000.

Gandhi is fond of depreciating Occidental materialism and worship of money for money's sake. Yet here in his own land is a prince whose worldly goods are estimated to exceed the combined wealth of the richest three families in the United States.

"The world's richest man?" We doubt it. The richest man is he whose jewels are friends and his billion a mind at peace with the world and his fellow-men.

Another sign of national recovery is the retirement of the Capone brothers from the general scheme.

Judging from the tenor of conversation since he got home, Premier Laval came here largely to do scouting work.

It is difficult to imagine better augury for Great Britain than the prospect of teamwork by Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Baldwin.

King George's secret opinion of Gandhi would be ever so much more interesting than Gandhi's secret opinion of King George.

This is a time to keep in mind the clear distinction between economy and penuriousness. The first is a virtue, the second is a vice.

The Brooklyn minister who thinks that "the modest girl of today is the most attractive of all," ought to explain just what he means by the expression "modest girl."

The Boston Transcript reassures New England farmers that a cedar mill is not a still. That is one reason why the rural population and the urban population find it so hard to view the Volstead Act in the same light.

Other Editorial Thoughts

WOODS INSTEAD OF WASTES

Aside from the political interest in the adoption by the people of the State of New York of constitutional amendment number 3, supported by Governor Roosevelt but opposed by ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith, there will be general interest in the success of the amendment as a measure of conservation. Public interest in the mere question whether the influence of Roosevelt or that of Smith was to prevail has diverted attention from the merits of the proposition itself. Other States, and particularly the New England States, are interested in the step as an economic, or agriculture, matter.

The amendment itself makes it possible for the State of New York to expend $10,000,000 over a period of eleven years for the purchase of farms or bodies of land which cannot be used profitably for the purposes of cultivation, and the systematic foresting of this land by the State. The land itself must be of the sort known to conservation authorities as "sub-marginal," or non-arable. The true function of all such lands is to raise timber. But not every owner of such land, especially in the present state of agriculture, is able to forest it on his own account; nor does private ownership favor the economic use of such lands, since timber, to afford profit must be in large bodies. The extent of such non-arable land, outside of the present State and national parks or reserves, is estimated at all the way between one million and three million acres. The farmers' interests are on the side of the process. The State Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry declared itself in favor of the amendment, and it was undoubtedly this attribute on the part of the farmers' organization that led to the popular approval of the measure.

On the land acquired by the State, under legislation based on this new organic law, scientific forestry will be practiced, and it will be possible to cut at least the margins of the property, and after thirty-five years on the whole of it, a sufficient amount of timber to meet the public demand. The acquired and forested land will not be kept as a mere playground or arboricultural curiosity--though it will incidentally serve for recreation purposes--but will serve a truly economic use, while permanently conserving the forests. Ex-Governor Smith, as a matter of fact, has not denied the economic or conservative value of the general proposition, but he sought to make it appear that the expenditure was undesirable at the present time, and that the cutting and sale of timber now standing on such land as the State might purchase would be permitted. Governor Roosevelt has shown that the standing timber would be sufficiently protected under the amendment. He will derive deserved credit for his advocacy of the amendment.

The development which is likely to take place under the legislation on this amendment will be of great interest to the New England States. We have here quite as large a proportion of idle non-arable lands as New York State has. The proposed process is a measure of reclamation, of economy of material public advantage, as well as a step toward the enhancement of the beauties of nature. --Boston Transcript.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Manhattan hedge-hodge, helter-skelter:

Soaring wheat prices make the talk distinctly bullish and distinctly gay in almost every circle here.... By the time these words are in type another dip may have occurred, or prosperity may be definitely on the make.... A young broker I know cleaned up $1,750 today, after months of losses, and spent $500 of it on a pedigreed poodle, defending himself with the statement that he had forgotten how to spend money sanely or otherwise.

Peter Arno, they tell me, didn't know how bad his "Here Goes the Bride," which opened recently, was until the next afternoon, when he got around to reading the reviews.... His friends kept the air ringing with praise all evening, which is characteristic of so-called "smart" Broadway, but strikes me as somewhat cruel.... If it had been a great melodrama produced by one of the hardened Broadway boys, the sponsor would have known what his piece looked like to candidacy polite cronies long before the curtain.

SOUND ACCOMPANIMENT

My taxi driver this afternoon put a mouth organ to his lips and piped melodiously when traffic halted us.... He frowned over my dime tip. " Didn't you like the music, Bo?".... Every time I pass a laundry I am reminded of the war rumors of the Orient.... Ethelda Bedford phoned and wanted to know where my copy was on the series we are doing on young people in New York.... Why do newspaper folk, used to meeting a deadline for years, have so much trouble finishing any other sort of writing on time?

A mention in this space weeks ago of magazine editors being currently avid for stories has brought a batch of inquiries. The truth is, there was never any overstocking on good yarns; but the three or four national pubs which run the very short lengths are particularly anxious for stuff with a punch now.... No use naming them, for they are on every table.... And incidentally, if the nice newspaper chap in Lowell, Mass., whose letter dropped out of my coat pocket, will shoot his stuff to the editors of the magazines he sees in the biggest newsstand piles, he will get a sympathetic reading.... Editors rarely return missives, anyway, being as a rule eager for good fiction by unknowns—and finding very, very little of it.

"WRONG SIZE, PRINCE!"

New York department stores are full of royalty, and you are likely to be waited on by a prince or baroness in many of them.... At random: Princess Vassil of Russia is head of a perfume department; Princess Leveine presides over the hat department of another firm; Baroness Mary von Reicher is buyer for third concern.... Then there is the fifth Earl of Gosford, head of a swank firm importing table luxuries; Ralph Ponce de Leon is a salesmen in a famous men's wear shop, although he never attires, say his colleagues, to his cousin, who sought the magic fountain.

Prince George Constantine of Russia oversees a floor in a high-end department store, and his friend, Premier Laval, paid his respects while visiting New York.... Count Maurice de Bosqari is in charge of another tier for the same concern; he is Italian, but insists on being addressed as "Mr."

Black-eyed peas can be bought in the Italian quarter and in at least one of the big department stores, but are hard to find elsewhere.... That fellow deserves the racketeer's cut who offered a hundred dollar prize for "the most perfect orange submitted" and sold the fruit thus collected for $12,000.... Is there any other way of chronicling stray facts like these, except with the use of dots, thus.....?

Wheat prices indisputably have advanced considerably.

Oil prices have increased also.

Commerce department statistics show a more satisfactory international trade balance.

Cables indicate a happier outlook in several foreign fields.

At home factories have reopened in a number of cities.

The barometer can hardly be said to have risen perceptibly.

The present batch sounds a bit more convincing.

almost fancies a shade of difference upward—which has not been in the case in a long time past.

Despite all these signs, George Soule of the National Bureau of Economic Research, a few days ago warned Chairman Robert F. La Follette, at a meeting of the Senate committee on manufactures, that unless an accident brings America out of its present crisis within six months, capital liquidation will create a worse state of affairs than it has yet experienced.

However, Senator William H. King of Utah, who, as a Democrat, scarcely is to be expected to venture predictions of an overly hopeful nature for the administration, remarks that "the slump is bound to bottom sooner or later with some necessarily ensuing recovery."

The senator frankly does not consider America's policies of the last 11 years consistent with permanent prosperity, but is far from certain that 1932 will not witness a measure of it temporarily.

Considering the situation politically, "If election were held tomorrow," he says, "the Democrats would be easy victors. Next November, in order to keep the present regime in control of the government, we know who would be elected."

To a certain extent recent accounts of favorable industrial, agricultural and financial developments have been marked by a faint ringing of genuineness, at any rate.

Hitherto, since the crash of 1929, all such hints quite obviously have been merely psychological hooey, meaning nothing.

JUDGE STEFFEN TO QUIT COACHING JOB

CHICAGO, Nov. 13—When Carnegie Tech plays its last game of the season on Thanksgiving day Judge Walter P. Steffen will resign the job of football coach he has held there for eighteen years, he said today.

Announcement of his decision was first made last night at the annual University of Chicago alumnae banquet where the judge was a speaker.

He explicitly denied a report that he was to succeed Amos Alonzo Stagg as football coach at the University of Chicago. He intimated he was through with coaching for good and for all.

Judge Steffen has had notable success at Carnegie, having scored triumphs over Rockne's Notre Dame teams in 1926 and 1928.

CEDARVILLE TEAM ENJOYS BREATHER

Cedarville College's football team has a breathing spell this weekend.

The Yellow Jackets will be idle due to an open date on the schedule. The Borstmen had booked a tentative game with Defiance to be played at Cedarville this Saturday but the contest did not materialize.

Cedarville gridders will resume their schedule next week, playing a return game with Urbana Junior College at Urbana next Saturday.

FOOTBALL SIDELINE STORIES

The Wagner Jewelry Store, 6 W. Main St., will be closed Saturday following sale of the bankrupt stock by brokers who bought the assets of the business some time ago.

The stock has been disposed of in auctions conducted by Jack M. Werst, auctioneer, who expects to close out the stock with Saturday's auctions, afternoon and evening.

An original plan to maintain the store as a going concern has been practically abandoned, it is announced.

VOYAGER'S BOTTLE FOUND SAN FRANCISCO—Ben Gheffoll, automobile dealer, wasn't shipwrecked—but he tried the bottle stunt, and it worked. On August 27, 1930 Gheffoll and his family were returning to New York from Europe on the liner Paris. Five hundred miles out Gheffoll wrote his name on a slip of paper sealed it in a bottle, and cast it overboard. Now he has been informed by Alex Da Mello, of Berkley, Cal., that Mello had picked up the bottle on a beach in the Azores Islands on April 28 of this year, while fishing.

"Don't worry, kid. Some day you'll overcome your recklessness and develop into a real triple-threat man."

The unabashed back looked up and grinned.

"Heck, coach," he said. "I'm a triple-threat man right now. The other guys never know whether I'm going to bite, punch or kick."

Plaudits of the motion picture world are being showered on Marie Dressler, Hollywood's "grand lady," and Lionel Barrymore, who have been designated as giving the best performances in 1931 by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Her stellar performance in "Min and Bill" won the honor for Miss Dressler and Barrymore's role in "A Free Soul" placed him at the top of the male list. Marie Dressler's comeback is again the talk of the screen world as she climbs to the pinnacle of movie fame after many years passed in semi-oblivion.

TELLING the WORLD'S NEWS with PICTURES

Modern Farm Is Home Of Congressman

Views taken at Fountain Park Farm, near Woodstock, where Representative Charles Brand will make his home in the heart of a rich agricultural section. The pictures are:

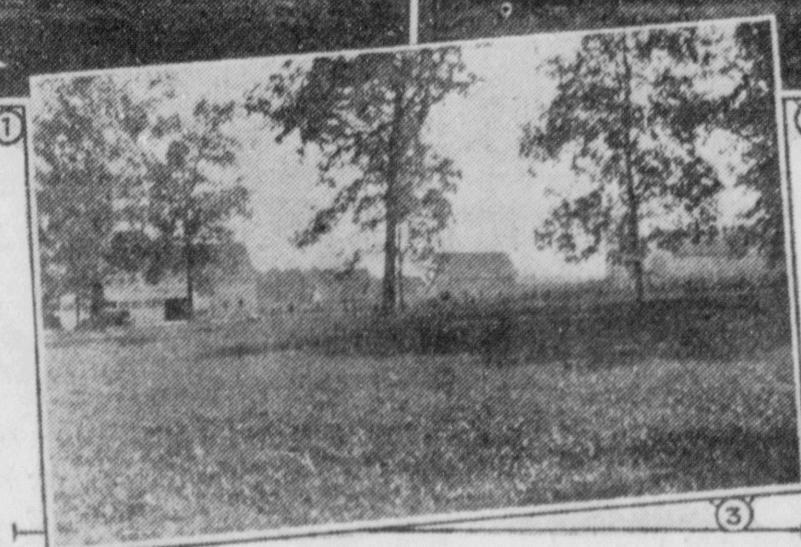

No. 1—Residence in which Mr. Brand with his family will live. A swimming pool in the foreground is shown.

No. 2—Modern dairy barn with stanchions for 40 cows equipped to gain major returns in the dairy business.

No. 3—General view of the spacious farm buildings on the farm.

No. 4—Mr. Brand standing in a field of Boone County, Kentucky, white corn, some of which was 15 feet, eight inches in height. Nine acres of this corn were sufficient to fill a silo holding 185 tons.

Mr. Brand has nine other farms averaging about 250 acres in size where the dairy and hog business is conducted. Practically all of the feed for the livestock is raised on the farms, including alfalfa, corn, oats, flax, barley, sweet clover and bluegrass. Close to three and one-half tons of inspected milk is produced on these farms per day and is used in the production of baby food.

When Bermuda Took a Step Forward

With the official opening of the first railway in Hamilton, Bermuda, it lost its appearance of having been lifted bodily from the Victorian era and dropped into the midst of our modern civilization. Before the building of the railway the only mode of transportation was bicycle, horse-drive lorry or old-fashioned carriage. Practically the entire population of Hamilton turned out for the great event when progress took a step forward with the dedication of the first car line.

Society Pays Homage to King Horse

FREEDOM IS THE KEYNOTE OF MODERN DANCE

Freedom of expression is the aim of the modern dance, exemplified by Mary Wigman from Berlin, Germany; Doris Humphrey of New York, and Eleanor Frampton, late of New York, now teaching the new art at the Cleveland Institute of Music. "Ballet dancing is conventionalized and limited," says Miss Frampton. "The new dancing allows free expression to the dancer and permits the creative artist virtually limitless possibilities." Incidentally, pudgy waistlines vanish.

As a great governmental project, in the suburb of Stahnsdorf, Berlin, hundreds of country homes of the blockhouse style, two models of which are above, are to be built. Each contains two bed-

"Tin Hats" on Rivet "Front"

Remember the "tin hats" of war days—the steel helmets that saved many a skull from being punctured in France? Well, modern business has found a use for them, and here's proof of the point. These two helmeted electricians working on the new Boston post office, donned the headgear to protect themselves from falling rivets. They can testify to the value of the hats when hot and heavy rivets are falling about 'em—something like shrapnel.

'Daughter Love' Jails Girl

"Mother is old and couldn't stand it," said Corinne De Young, 16-year-old Cambridge, Mass., girl, in explaining why she took her mother's place in a jail cell. Mrs. Phoebe De Young, 60, was found guilty of larceny and, through a legal error, the girl, who accompanied her parent to court, was placed in a cell. She remained silent and "served time." The pair is shown.

Closet Captive and Parents

Found terribly emaciated and scarred from her four years' imprisonment in a dark closet in her father's house in Washington, D. C., Edith Riley, 18, was rescued from her fearsome "prison" when U. S. Marshals raided the home of Harry Riley (center) and the girl's stepmother, Mrs. Elsie Riley (right), who are held in connection with the case. The alleged torture victim is shown clutching a doll friends gave her at the Children's Receiving Home, where she is being brought back to health.

GIRL FACES TRAGIC DILEMMA; REFUSES TO FORGIVE FAMILY

city of Norristown, Pa., where a county coroner will hold an inquest.

There was still that answer to Rose's problem to be found: shall she come to the defense of a murderer who did his deed out of love for her and chagrin for her lost virtue? Or shall she continue to support the memory of the beloved victim, who her father says betrayed her?

Without her own mind at peace on her course of action, Rose Allen hesitated to put herself under public scrutiny.

She has passed a most troublous twenty-four hours since for father gave his amazing account of her affair with Donaldson. At first she did not know that he had revealed all, in a frantic effort to save Eddie, the son, from the electric chair.

When she learned that the world had been told of her seduction in Scranton, Pa., last August, it was a shock. A physician was summoned yesterday afternoon, to attend her. Rumors that she had left the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pearce, where her father also is staying, were circulated but she still was there this morning, thinking, pondering, refusing to eat.

She learned of her lover's funeral, and the hard hot tears of her grief caught in her throat. His body had been laid into the freshly turned earth, without his sweet-heart's presence at the grave. But, secluded in the luxurious home of her society friends, Rose Allen still hesitated to forgive her family, upon whom she has laid the blame for Donaldson's death from the start.

She regarded herself yet as "Skinny" Donaldson's girl, only, now she no longer feels called upon to make public statement in young Donaldson's defense, the young man's father, Francis A. Donaldson, Jr., insurance broker, has relieved her of that responsibility, one she apparently felt deeply.

"A brutal, unpremeditated murder cannot be excused by the futile attempt of a badly advised, distracted father to save his son by hiding him behind the skirts of his daughter, whose character, the father himself destroys," said Donaldson, through his attorney.

The attempt to poison public opinion before the trial by having Mr. Allen's broadcast through the press is not original or new, nor will it accomplish its purpose. The truth of this terrible tragedy will come from the lips of disinterested witnesses at the proper time."

But, according to John R. K. Scott, attorney for the defense, some of these disinterested witnesses have volunteered to testify in young Eddie's behalf. He would not reveal who they were but intimated there was one at least, whose name was "very important."

Another society girl may enter the case, too. She is the girl whose name was said to have been linked with young Donaldson's before Rose's was. She went to Europe, when gossip became too embarrassing, and has since returned and is married. It is believed she will tell the story of her own relations with the dead man, in order to lend credit to the contention that Donaldson was a ladies' man.

MANY VOLUNTEER GIFTS RECEIVED FOR CHEST

DESPITE the fact Xenia's fourth annual Community Chest drive does not officially start until next Tuesday, unsolicited advance contributions amounting to approximately $500 have already been turned in to chest headquarters, it was divulged by fund workers Friday.

An illustration of indicated increased interest in the forthcoming drive, St. Agnes Guild of Christ Episcopal Church has sent a check to the Chest for an amount double the contribution made by this organization a year ago.

A number of individuals not expecting to be in the city during the week the drive is to be conducted, November 17-24, have also been so thoughtful as to turn in their donations in advance, it is disclosed.

"This shows that the citizens of Xenia are mindful of the extra pull that will be made upon the Chest fund and are contributing freely," observed T. H. Zell, general campaign chairman. "The need is great. Each one must consider how great his responsibility is on such a drive. Each one must help."

RINEHART INVENTS DEVICE FOR PLANES

DAYTON, O., Nov. 13—A new aid to remove many of the hazards of flying was announced here today by an aircraft engineer, Howard M. Rinehart, who stated that after four years of development work he had perfected a wing flap to reduce the landing speed of airplanes.

The flaps, operated from the cockpit of a plane, are attached to the lower wings, and will reduce the landing speed to about twenty-five miles per hour, he said. They will be an aid to the lifting power of the ship in take-offs, also. Rinehart reported that licenses have been granted to the General Aviation Corporation, a subsidiary of General Motors, and to the Sikorsky aviation corporation, for use of the devise.

ENGLISH Flier IS SEEKING RECORD

LYMPNE, England, Nov. 13—J. A. Mollison, English flier, took off here today in a 120-horsepower monoplane in an attempt to establish a new flight record between England and Cape Town.

The present record holder is Miss Peggy Salamah, 19-year-old London debutante, who made the flight in less than six days. Mollison planned to make Brindisi, Italy, his first stop.

NEW JASPER

The New Jasper Sunday School pupils are invited to attend an all day meeting at Paintersville, when a program by the Religious Council of Education will be presented.

A quartet from this place composed of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Spahr and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hagler will sing at the services in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Spahr and Dr. and Mrs. George Davis are camping in northern Michigan, where the men are hunting for big game."

Rev. W. E. Nocka, of this place, preached at the church Sunday morning. It was the fiftieth anniversary of his ministry and he used the same text as that of fifty years ago. It is found in Isaiah, the first three verses of the sixty-first chapter. About twenty came up from Cincinnati to be present at the service. Among those present was his son Elmer, Mr. and Mrs. Bodenstein and daughter, and Dr. and Mrs. Eberle and family. Mrs. Eberle and Mrs. Bodenstein are daughters of Rev. Nocka. Mr. and Mrs. Bodenstein, Mrs. Eberle and Elmer Nocka sang a quartet number and Mrs. Eberle a solo. Both were very much enjoyed and appreciated by all. Mrs. Houck of Cincinnati was present and she also had the privilege to attend her first service fifty years ago. Among the others present from a distance was Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Houck and Mr. and Mrs. Birchfield of Xenia and the Veit family of Dayton.

The New Jasper Church is very thankful for this retired minister in their community and this tribute to Rev. Nocka was read in the Sunday School by one of the members:

"Rev. Nocka, we have not known you many years, but of the few, you have made us happy, with smiles and tears. You've been our friend in sorrow, when it comes our way. Your prayers make us more patient, day by day. So we join in wishing you, your children, and good wife, Joy, happiness, and prosperity, all along your life."

MINE CLOSED BY LABOR DISORDERS

CADIZ, O., Nov. 13—Torn by labor disorders since an announcement of a 6 percent wage cut ten days ago, officials of the Ohio and Pennsylvania mine here today definitely suspended operations pending settlement of the strike situation.

The strike was brought to a climax yesterday when fifty strikers clashed with nearly 200 pickets. Five men were injured in the encounter before the strikers were repulsed by deputies.

Guards patrolled the mine today as a precaution against any further disturbances.

Fairfield News

Mrs. Elsie Barran—Correspondent Phone No. 192

The King's Daughters Sunday School Class of the M. E. Church enjoyed a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Emma Lang, Main St., Thursday. A business meeting followed the luncheon.

Members of the Boy Scout Troop attended a meeting in Xenia Thursday evening. Nine Fairfield youths were awarded merit badges.

Forty members of George Dignam Post, American Legion, attended a meeting of the post Thursday evening.

Paul Fuller, service officer and former commander of Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion, has been notified of his appointment as chairman of the Ohio Legion's Christmas observance committee that will cooperate in playing Santa Claus to pupils of the O. S. and S. O. Home here Christmas Day.

This committee will operate in conjunction with similar committees representing the Grand Army of the Republic and United Spanish War Veterans in making plans for the proper Christmas observances at the orphanage and in selecting gifts for the children.

The more than 700 pupils of the institution are annually permitted to express their individual preference as to what gifts they most desire, and the joint committees of the three patriotic organizations endeavor to fulfill these requests to the best of their ability. The yearly expenditure on Christmas gifts is paid by the Legion, Spanish War Veterans and G. A. R. proportionate to the number of children at the Home representing each war period.

Other members of the American Legion's Christmas committee are: Howard S. Faust, Plain City; R. S. Baker, Somerset; H. J. Watson, East Cleveland; Samuel Adams, Wellsville, and Herbert R. Mooney, Woodsfield, a member of the Home trustee board.

A meeting of the joint committees is planned for Wednesday night, November 18 at the Xenia institution, and a new secretary is expected to be appointed to succeed John Edward, state secretary of the United Spanish War Veterans Association and secretary of the Christmas Observance Committee, who is confined in a hospital and will not be present.

Each of the three senators, from widely different sections of the country, was subsequently defeated.

They all attributed their defeat to their votes for George Dignam and the joint committees of the three patriotic organizations to restrict their annual parties to two, instead of the usual minimum of four.

Prices of eleven-piece orchestras for an evening chapter dance will be reduced from $130 to $100, it was said.

Prices in the past have ranged as high as $500 in several rare instances when orchestras with nationally known leaders were brought in for formal parties.

He has probably known Mr. Hoover longer than any other person in Washington.

McNary came to the senate from the Oregon Supreme Court. He is serving his third term, being easily re-elected last year by a large majority when the rest of the Republican ticket was either defeated or barely winning through.

He has also preferred to cultivate his own home grounds, the Pacific northwest, to which he is deeply devoted. He has repeatedly been asked to take chairmanships of senate committees of more importance than the Agricultural committee which he heads.

McNary has been satisfied where he was.

This committee deals with the problems that interest most his state and section and these committee members.

McNary is slender and active, with amiable blue eyes and of distinct youthful appearance.

He is one of the best golfers in the Senate.

In his boyhood he was a neighbor of the President's, who was then living with an uncle in Oregon.

He was younger than the President, but saw him frequently.

He has probably known Mr. Hoover longer than any other person in Washington.

He is a regular. He is a party man, but a sturdy independent.

His politics are grounded on an acute realism and unflinching frankness.

McNary does not permit party loyalty to sway his vote.

This independence of intellect, combined with his patience, tact and good nature in dealing with men, his trustworthiness, and long experience in western politics where democracy is vigorous and rugged, have made him one of the shrewdest and soundest political strategists in American politics.

National Republican leaders have never made the use of his counsel that it merits.

McNary is just a bit too independent in his views.

Likewise, he keeps his opinions to himself, until asked.

Janet Scorns Bret Harte, Joan Bennett Takes Part

For some reason Janet Gaynor turned up her nose at "Salomy Jane," but it is good enough for Joan Bennett and the picture as well. This Bret Harte story was filmed in 1923 with Jacqueline Logan in the feminine lead and George Fawcett was also a member of the cast. As Director Raoul Walsh isn't ready to shoot, Baxter will make a flying trip to New York; Ralph Bellamy, another apple of Fox's eye is a third player slated for "Salomy Jane."

There likely won't be any quarrel between the author of "Strictly Dishonorable" and the producer of the motion picture version of the play.

After Preston Sturges, the author saw the picture he wrote Carl Laemmle of Universal, as follows: "I have just seen the celluloid version of 'Strictly Dishonorable' and I want to tell you how dis-pointed I am. I thought the screen play would begin in a colonial mansion with sixty-four columns and an army of liveried flunkies and progress luxuriously through Roman baths, gin parties and Roman baths to a thrilling automobile chase ending on a mountain top with the golden dawn bathing the features of the two-lovers ensconced by each other's beauty.

"That was what I expected. Instead, I saw only my play. Granted that you did it beautifully; granted that your cast is magnificent; granted that you used taste and discretion; and granted that little Sidney Fox can charm the birds out of the trees and back again, your production left me sad and disillusioned."

"I arrived in the projection room with a very superior feeling and a carp in each pocket and presently found myself deeply interested and admiring my own play. Nothing could be lower than this. I am greatly disappointed."

Sturges' experience was evidently similar to that of Mae Marsh who was reported seen crying when the lights went up after the preview of her picture, "Over the Hill." For that matter so were a lot of people.

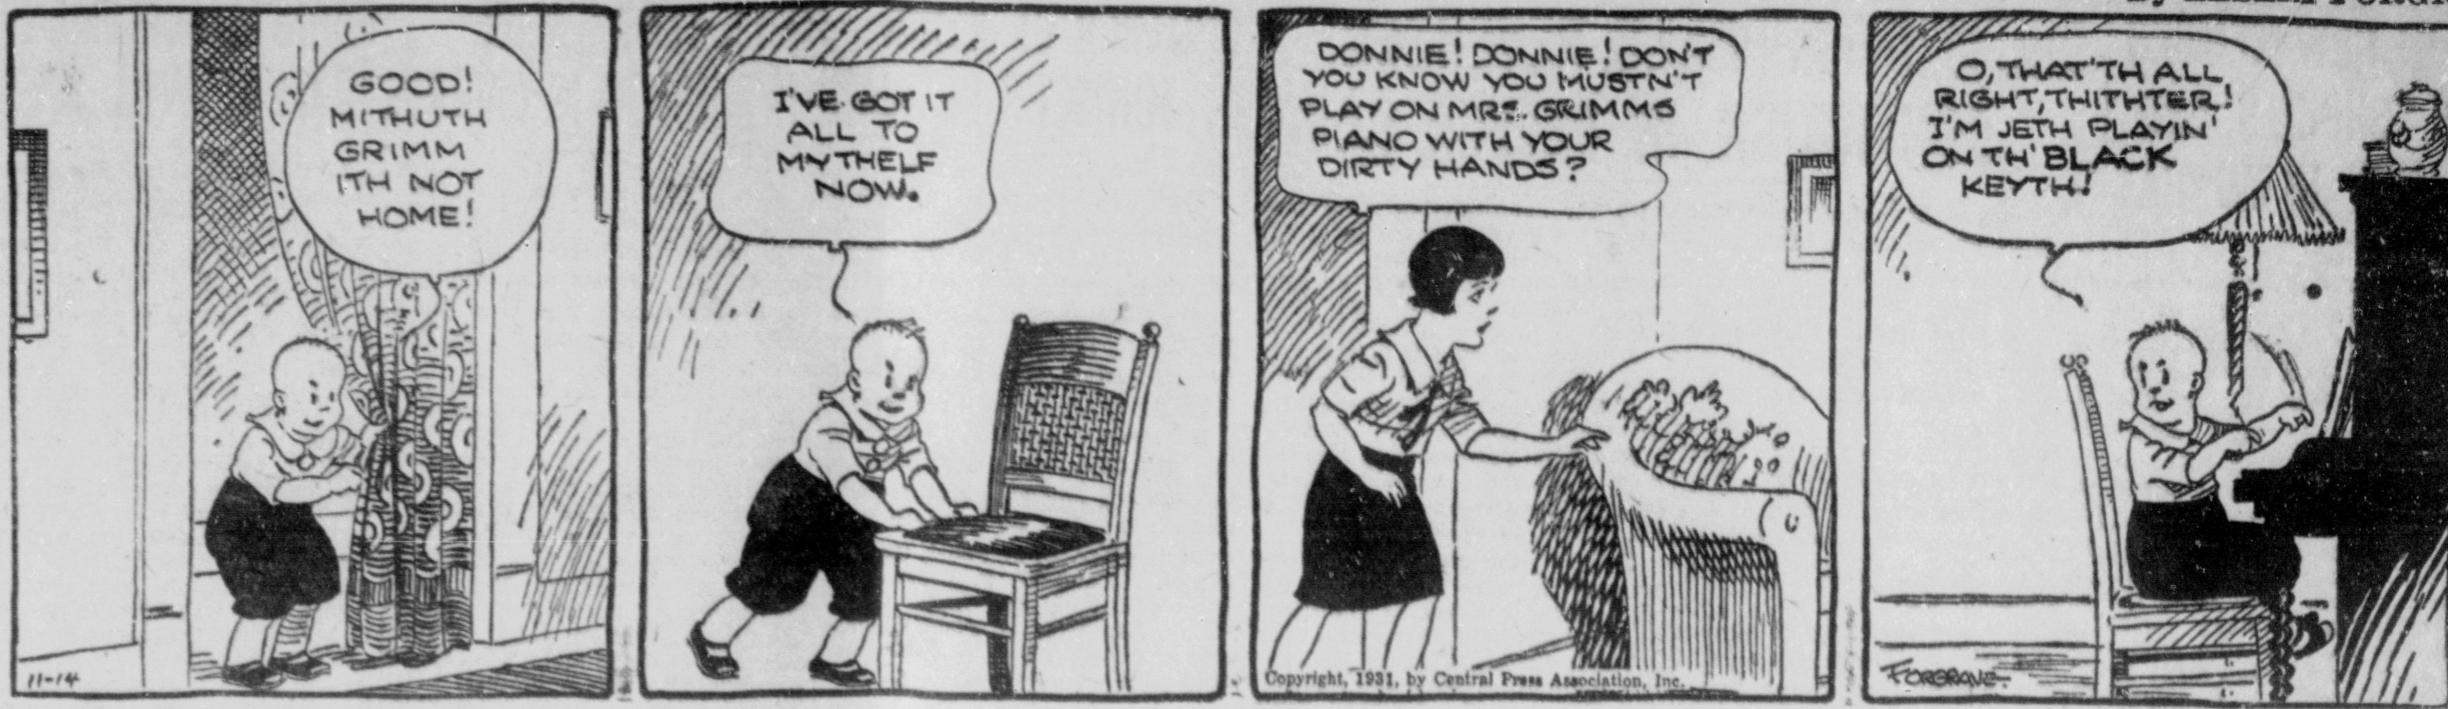

This recalls the time grand old Sidney Drew was discovered in a

SELECT NEW MEMBER FOR SCHOOL BOARD VACANCY ON MONDAY

New fuel to the flames of factional unrest in the affairs of the Beaver Creek Twp. school district has apparently been added by revelation of the election of Erith R. Shoup on the township school board to fill a vacancy that had previously been filled, presumably, by the election of Edward Stafford.

The latest action of the school board was taken at a special meeting Monday night when all of the four remaining members were present, the majority vote following when a motion was made by George D. Durbaugh. A dispute which followed is said to have resulted in fistfights.

A majority of board members, it is said, held the view that the election of Stafford, a resident of the western part of the township, on the board last July 31 was illegal on the ground he was named at a meeting when only three board members were present, one of whom cast a dissenting vote.

The vacancy was created during July when George N. Shoup resigned because of ill health. At the meeting when Stafford was elected to succeed him, Harry Ferguson, president of the board, was absent. S. H. Shawhan, vice-president, is said to have voted against Stafford while votes in Stafford's favor were cast by the other two members, Albert Ankeney and George Durbaugh.

Residents of the school district are now speculating over whether Stafford or Shoup or both, will be present and attempt to participate in the deliberations of the board at its next regular meeting set for Saturday night.

Shoup figured prominently last April in litigation involving selection of a site for the new $180,000 centralized school building, now under construction in the township.

On behalf of himself and 632 other residents of the township, Shoup brought an injunction suit seeking to enjoin the school board from erection of the school on the Haines farm site mid-way between the present high school and Zimmerman.

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy dissolved a temporary restraining order and dismissed the injunction proceedings. As a result the building is now under construction and is expected to be under roof within three weeks.

COURT OF APPEALS REVERSES CONVICTION IN PEEFER CASE

It is not a criminal offense under the laws of Ohio for a man more than 21 years of age to take a girl a few months under 15 years of age to another state and marry her without the consent and without the knowledge of the mother of the girl.

This, in effect, is the substance of a ruling handed down Thursday by the second district Court of Appeals, reversing the lower court's case of John Peffer, 41, South Charleston, who was fined $400 and costs and sentenced to a year in the Dayton Workhouse for allegedly contributing to the delinquency of a 14-year-old Xenia high school girl.

Peffer's arrest resulted after it became known he had eloped with Julia Mae Elliott, a freshman student in high school, and married her secretly at Newport, Ky., last January 16. The fine and sentence were imposed by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, who subsequently adjudged the young wife juvenile delinquent and had her committed to the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware.

Attorney Marcus Shoup, counsel for Peffer, indicated Thursday that in view of the appellate court decision favorable to his client, he may institute habeas corpus proceedings to compel release of Peffer's wife from the state institution.

Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister, who obtained the conviction, held the view that the marriage was void under both the laws of Ohio and Kentucky and that Peffer violated the Ohio laws by taking the girl to Kentucky and marrying her.

"We do not hesitate to say that the marriage of a man of the age of Peffer with a girl of the age of Julia Mae Elliott does not meet
